A focused conversation on this season of my ministry

Here is a sequence of questions that can be used in a clergy group to help each person reflect on this recent season of their ministry. Sometimes, in a clergy group, we might only explore the “what?” or the “what next?” in our conversations with one another. The following sequence of questions allows for a fuller conversation and reflection.

What?

What have I attempted in my ministry during this recent church year? What was my intention? What did I actually do? What was the response?

Gut?

What is my intuition or my gut telling me about this situation?

So what?

How do I make sense of this experience that I've described in the “What?” section above? Where have I experienced God in this process?

What next?

What leadings of the Spirit, next steps, actions, or practices do I want to actually take into this next season or chapter of my ministry?
